1. One day early in November, 57 UN prisoners were marched through the streets of Tsinan (117-00, 36-41). Twenty-five were American, 20 were British, and the rest were Turkish or other nationalities. They were escorted by members of the Chinese Communist Propaganda Corps as they marched along the Ching Ewh (經二路) road, outside the Pu Li (普利門) gate. 25X1
2. The prisoners were taken to a mass meeting at Cheeloo University and were forced to make speeches which were frequently interrupted by Communist interpreters. The content of the speeches was repetition of Chinese Communist propaganda to the effect that the prisoners were conscripts, the American people were opposed to war, and they had been well treated by the Communists. The prisoners looked pale and were shabbily dressed.
